Not illustrated. 1904 Excerpt: ... V. John Jay To Edmund Randolph. (Despatches, England, Volume 1.) private London 13 Sept. 1794 Sir I have had the pleasure of receiving your Letter by Mr Fisher. He called when I was from Home. Then and directly afterwards, I was so engaged in public Business, as that I could not return his visit immediately. The moment I could find Leisure for the purpose, I called with Col. Trumbull at his Lodgings; and was mortified to learn that he had just gone to Liverpool. I hope on his Return to see him, and then to have an opportunity of shewing him those Civilities and attentions which I shall always think due to your Recommendations. In my public Letter to you by this opportunity, I thought it most delicate to omit mentioning that your Letter by Mr. Munro, and his Speech to the Convention are regarded here as not being consistant with the neutral situation of the U. S. an uneasy sensation has thereby been made here in the public mind, and probably in that of the Cabinet. It is not pleasant for me to say these things, but so is the fact, and it is proper that you should know it. I enclose two pamphlets. How far the Ideas they convey may be useful in our Country I cannot say. With the best Wishes for your Health and Happiness I am Sir your most obt. Hble servt. John Jay. The Honl. Edm. Randolph Esqr. VI. John Q. Adams To The Secretary Of State John Marshall. (Despatches, Germany, Special Volume, Despatch No. 182.) Berlin 21 February 1801. Sir In addition to the papers, which I had the honour of sending you with my last letter, I now enclose a translation of the ordinance annexed to the Convention for an armed neutrality, and referred to in its third Article. It is yet possible that England may discover some means of avoiding the issue of a War with almost all Europ...
